Devlin Says:

"Get Your Feet Into a Pair of Success Shoes and They'll Take You to the Right Place"

AND WHAT DEVLIN SAYS IS SO.

It's an ill wind that blows no one any good. If everybody everywhere sold as classy a line of footwear as we do, we wouldn't be doing the amount of business that we are enjoying. We make it a point to please the individual with a pair of shoes that will bring him back where he got them. Bring your feet in here and give them a chance of their life.

WORSE THAN FACING GUNFIRE

Gallant Seaman Found Himself in Dilemma From Which He Was Extricated in Nick of Time.

A Jack far from H. M. S.—entered a southwestern London post office to change a money order.

As it was a government pay order he was asked, according to regulations, to show his certificate of identity. But the sailor had lost the certificate.

All the girls in the post office became anxious to help.

"Haven't you your name marked anywhere?" urged one. Jack thought hard, suddenly kindled with inspiration, opened his mouth to speak, and then stood silent. A flush deepened his tanned complexion.

"Well?" urged the young postal lady.

The sailor wanted that money badly. He faced the girls. "Yes," he blurted, "my name's marked on my shirt."

Post office girls have no training in the technical lingo on his majesty's navy. Whatever sort of document, docket or disk this "shirt" might be, it was her duty not to pay the money until she had seen it. "Then let me see your 'shirt,'" she demanded amiably but firmly.

Small veins knotted on Jack's temples, a moisture stood on his brow. But desperate finance needs desperate measures. "Have you got a screen here?" he asked in a hollow voice.

"A screen!" echoed the post office girl in bewilderment. "Aye, a screen!" repeated Jack on a rising note of agony.

It was then that a colleague saved one of his majesty's A. M.'s from apoplexy by a hurried and whispered explanation to his inquisition.

Perhaps because the gods love laughter the sailor's identity was then accepted without further evidence.—London Daily Mail.

SUN'S RAYS CARESS TEMPLE

Tinge of Red Upon Mighty Columns of Baalbek May Be Explained in Two Ways.

At Baalbek man has truly achieved the cyclopean. Here the excavators have unearthed a complete set of ruins. Here lying guides get tourists to swallow bigger stories than in any place I know of, says a writer in the Christian Herald.

Here the towering columns of the temple of the sun watch the orb of day descend behind the Lebanon, after the lifting shadows have engulfed the smaller temple of Bacchus. And the sun, in departing, leaves his kiss upon the stately colonnade in a clearly seen tinge of red.

There are prosaic folk who say that this is caused by iron in the rock. That may do as an explanation to those who believe in the age of iron, but this mighty temple does not belong to the present age of machinery.

It is more likely that the red tinge in the rock is the stain of blood—the blood of men who died in erecting this everlasting monument. Perhaps it is as well that the blood of the laborers should show on the monument of the conqueror who built this temple to an unknown god.

Men who are killed in mines and dangerous occupations today have no such mighty reminders of their toil as the blush which shows on the graceful columns of Baalbek when the setting sun slowly settles behind the long line of lofty Lebanon.

Strength of a Flower.

A rock split asunder by a growing tree that has found lodgment in what was at first only a small crack is a familiar sight to most people. The force that a tree exerts in accomplishing this feat is tremendous, but relatively it is not equal to that exerted by the flower that John Burroughs describes in a recent book, "The Breath of Life."

One of the most remarkable exhibitions of plant force I ever saw was in a western city, where I observed a wild sunflower forcing its way up through the asphalt pavement; the folded and compressed leaves of the plant, like a man's fist, had pushed against the hard but flexible concrete until it bulged up and split, and let the tireless plant through. The force exerted must have been many pounds. I think it doubtful if the strongest man could have pushed his fist through such a resisting medium.

Life activities are a kind of explosion, and the slow, continued explosions of this growing plant rent the pavement as surely as powder would have done. It is doubtful if any cultivated plant could have overcome such odds. It required the force of the untamed, hairy plant of the plains to accomplish the feat.

All Great Men.

Once upon a time, so the story goes, a Frenchman visiting the tomb of Napoleon wrote on a convenient wall the lines:

"'Bony' was a great man, a soldier brave and true."

An Englishman, coming along a little later, read this and added:

"But Wellington did beat him at the battle of Waterloo."

The next visitor was an American who, seeing the foregoing contributions, rushed into the competition with all of the restraint that characterizes members of our great nation:

"But braver still, and truer far and tougher than shoe leather,

"Was Washington, the man who could have licked them both together."

he wrote, and doubtless went away quite satisfied with his climax.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

To Remove Water Spots.

Take a piece of the same material as that spotted and dampen it in lukewarm water. Place on water spots on right side and press with a moderately warm iron. Press until both pressing cloth and material are dry. The spots will have disappeared.—National Magazine.

The Remedy.

"Would you like some tonic on your hair?" asked the barber. "I've got something here that will positively stop it from coming out." "I don't believe it," said the man in the chair. "The only thing that will stop my hair from coming out is a divorce."

New Oil-Extraction Process.

A process invented by an Italian chemist for extracting essential oils from citrus fruits is said not to affect the chemical properties of the oils in any way, and it is predicted that it eventually will revolutionize the industry.

Always Pay for Disobedience.

Obedience is economy. Disobedience, extravagance. He who disobeys the laws of nature has a doctor bill to pay. He who disobeys the laws of his country has a lawyer's bill to pay.
